My professional background:

After some initial training in economy and work in business, I studied psychology at the University of Zurich, the ETHZ and the University of Geneva. I completed my Ph.D. in clinical psychology at the University of California, Berkeley whereupon I embarked on an academic career as a professor at UCLA, UC Berkeley and McGill University in Montreal, Canada. After my return to Switzerland, I became professor of management psychology and director of the Chair of Higher Education at the EPFL in Lausanne. I have been in independent practice now for over 10 years as the head of MTC – Management Training & Coaching – offering leadership and management training as well as coaching.

My actual work is / my offers are:

I offer courses in Managerial Psychology and Career Boosting, as well as individual and team coaching and consultation and training in educational institutions, large and small companies, including start-ups. My coaching focuses on executive and career coaching, as well as outplacement. For more details, please consult my website.

My wish to participants of “Fix the leaky pipeline” is...

to continue their personal development and enrichment of their practical skills and interpersonal competence.

My motto for life is...

Learn from the past and concentrate on the future!
